

What is the International Network for Television and Radio Advancement (INTARA)?

Established in 2009 the International Network for Television and Radio Advancement (INTARA) is the all-Africa organisation whose mission is the stimulation of original and creative production work, and the encouragement of excellence through, education, recognition and leadership in television and radio production. Also, to promote effective human resource development and training policy as well as quality TV and Radio programs among INTARA members.

The membership of the association is open to all professionals in the television and radio industry, students of media studies and related industry practitioners in Africa. The organisation offers a range of membership benefits, which attract members from every corner of the television and radio production Community. This includes freelancers, specialist service providers, educationalists, government media departments and broadcasters. We actively encourage non-professionals to join and improve their skills.

The INTARA is a not-for-profit limited company - managed by an Executive Committee.

What is unique about INTARA members?

The one thing that all INTARA members have in common is that they all agree to act in accordance with our Code of Practice. Whilst the main purpose of this document is to protect our members' clients, it also governs the manner in which they conduct their business in general.

Our members are generally well informed, keen to learn new techniques, improve their knowledge, enhance their performance and embrace new technologies and conduct their business in a professional manner.

The INTARA educates its members in various ways, including the provision of a structured and incremental study facility enabling them to work towards INTARA Accreditation. Some sections of our INTARA website is open to members and non-members alike, and is the industry's leading source of information for those wanting to operate in the Television and Radio business professionally.
